JURY DELIBERATIONS
IN CONSPIRACY TRIAL OF OREGON MILITANTS

A federal court jury began deliberations on Thursday in the trial of six men and a woman charged with conspiracy for their roles in the armed takeover of a U.S. Wildlife center in Oregon earlier this year. U.S. District Judge Anna Brown in Portland instructed members of the 12-member panel late on Wednesday on how to apply the law to facts in the case, capping two days of closing arguments by prosecutors and defense lawyers. The jury began deliberations Thursday morning, Kevin Sonoff, a spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's office in Portland, said. The summations in turn followed weeks of testimony from witnesses, some of whom took part in the 41-day siege at Malheur National Wildlife Refuge in remote eastern Oregon that began in early January. REUTERS

ANOTHER NORTH KOREA
MISSILE FAILS, SAY US AND SOUTH

North Korea test-fired a missile that failed immediately after launch early on Thursday, the U.S. and South Korean militaries said, hours after the two countries agreed to step up efforts to counter the North's nuclear and missile threats. The missile was believed to be an intermediate-range Musudan and was launched from the western city of Kusong, where the isolated state attempted but failed to launch the same type of missile on Saturday, the U.S. Strategic Command and South Korea's Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said. The launch came shortly after the United States and South Korea agreed in Washington to bolster military and diplomatic efforts to counter the North's nuclear and missile programs, which it is pursuing in defiance of U.N. Security Council resolutions. REUTERS

VERIZON REVENUE
DROPS AS SUBSCRIBER
ADDITIONS DISAPPOINT

Verizon Communications Inc. added fewer than expected wireless subscribers in the third quarter due to intense competition, and indicated it may renegotiate a deal to buy Yahoo Inc after a breach of Yahoo user email accounts. As its bread-and-butter wireless operations struggle in a saturated phone market, Verizon had said in July it would buy Yahoo's core business for $4.83 billion to drive growth in advertising and media. The company said on Thursday total operating revenue in the quarter fell 6.7 percent to $30.94 billion, from $33.16 billion. Analysts had expected revenue of $31.14 billion, according to Thomson Reuters. Shares of Verizon, the No.1 U.S. wireless company, slipped 2.7 percent to $49.04 in afternoon trading. The stock has gained more than 6 percent this year so far. REUTERS

City considers banning performances by exotic animals

Circus reps argue the ban would bite into their profits.

NEHA BANKA KANORIA
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

Seven-year-old Freyja Land stood before City Council members Thursday and delivered a simple message: Animals are happier in nature than performing in circuses.

Animal handlers under the big top "use whips on big cats and bull hooks on elephants," she said.

Freyja was among those who testified during the council's public hearing on a proposal to ban performances by exotic animals in the city. A few children offered their opinions.

Ruby Goodman, 11, was more emphatic in her testimony.

"If these [acts] were done to a human, it would be illegal," she said. "So what is the difference between humans and circus animals? The ability to speak our language. That is why we are here."

The proposed legislation would ban the display of wild or exotic animals for public entertainment or amusement.

If passed, it would prohibit such businesses as circuses and petting zoos from using wild animals in their shows and exhibits, making New York City one of the many towns and cities in the country to have banned such performances.

Accredited zoos and aquariums would be exempt from the ban, as would registered research facilities, educational programs and religious ceremonies that do not involve keeping the animal in mobile facilities for more than 12 hours.

Prior to the hearing, a group of people held a rally to protest the use of wild animals in circuses.

"This isn't anti-circus. This is pro-circus," said Brian Shapiro, director of the Humane Society in New York, speaking of the proposed legislation. "This is about supporting circuses that understand that wild animals shouldn't be in these kind of acts."

Nearby, a smaller, pro-circus group held their own rally, sporting yellow stick-on badges that said "Keep the Circus in New York."

Council Member Rosie Mendez, who introduced the proposed legislation, noted that introduced a similar measure more than 10 years ago.

"Shortly after I introduced this legislation, the Bronx Zoo decided that it did not have enough room for its elephants," she said. "So my question was how can a circus travel from city to city with its [animal] trailers?"

Advocates of the ban argue that it might bring an end to abuse that animals face in circuses due to the physical aggression against these animals by their trainers, their poor living conditions and the brutal training programs that are designed to make them act for a live audience.

Circus representatives denied that their animals are mistreated.

"The statements made by the supporters of this proposal about performing animals are not based on any actual first-hand knowledge of big cat training, transport or care," said Alexander Lacey, a big cat trainer and presenter at Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey circus.

Council Member Corey Johnson, who joined Mendez in introducing the bill, responded that the company had been cited for 150 violations of the federal Animal Welfare Act, for causing animals trauma, stress, physical harm and unnecessary discomfort.

Although the circus representatives argued that removing animals from their shows would mean financial losses for them, Johnson cited the example of Cirque du Soleil performances where animals are not involved in any of the acts and are yet financially successful.

Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey circus phased out elephants earlier this year, however, lions, tigers, camels, donkeys, pigs, kangaroos, llamas and other animals are used in its shows. The Big Apple Circus uses camels, llamas, horses and dogs in shows.

Former City Council speaker faults mayor on homeless policies

The city's shelter population topped 60,000 for the first time.

GARY KANE
@MetroNewYork
gary.kane@metro.us

New York City's former City Council speaker is taking Mayor Bill de Blasio to task for what she sees as his failing approach to dealing with the city's homelessness problem.

"Clearly the city is aching in the face of this crisis that they know is not getting any better. They're aching for the mayor to stand up," Christine Quinn told The Wall Street Journal. "New Yorkers don't hear that, they don't see that, they don't have anything to believe in."

Quinn lost the Democratic mayoral primary to de Blasio three years ago. She currently serves as CEO of WIN, a non-profit organization working for homeless women and children.

Quinn's expressed frustration with the mayor's efforts to reduce homelessness comes on the heels of reports that the population of city shelters surpassed 60,000 for the first time in history.

City shelters housed

Former City Council Speaker Christine Quinn now serves as CEO of WIN. GETTY IMAGES

36,464 adults and 23,554 children this week, according to the daily report posted by the Department of Homeless Services on its website.

The shelter population was 50,689 when de Blasio took office.

Furthermore, the city is failing to recognize the "forgotten face of homelessness," Quinn wrote in an opinion piece published Wednesday in the Daily News.

"Despite what we see on the evening news, 70 percent of all homeless in New York City are families with children — the people we don't see regularly, who are likely not panhandling on subway cars or sleeping on the sidewalk," she wrote.

"These are women and children going about their daily lives, to work, to school, and, at the end of their day, going to bed in a shelter."

Quinn calls on the city to expand the eligibility standards to give more families access to permanent supportive housing, which combines rental assistance with social services. She also urges the city to develop more shelters.

The city must do more to ensure that families who are able to leave shelter are provided the resources and support needed to keep them from falling back into homelessness.

About 10 percent of the family who left shelters for permanent housing last year returned to the shelter within one year, she said.

The mayor's office responded to Quinn's criticism by arguing that it has implemented increased rental assistance and anti-eviction programs as measures to reduce shelter populations. City Hall is also reaching out to communities and organizations that help homeless individuals.

"We have committed to communicating our plan to ensure each neighborhood share responsibility in housing our city's most vulnerable," said Deputy Press Secretary Aja Worthy-Davis. "Though the city oversees the full scope of the homeless strategy, our partners are invaluable in this process."

De Blasio noted in an opinion piece he wrote for the Daily News on Wednesday that the homeless population started to escalate in 2011 when the previous administration stopped providing rental assistance.

"Since the start of our rental assistance programs in 2014, we've moved more than 45,000 people out of shelters and back into their own apartments, the mayor wrote. "Emergency rental assistance has helped some 390,000 people stay in their homes."

The city has also increased funds for lawyers to represent people fighting eviction in housing court, he added. The move has reduced evictions by 24 percent, he said.

Survey: Just 1 in 5 city baby boomers and Gen Xers have retirement plans

For city baby boomers and Generation Xers, the old adage "saving for a rainy day" has not stood the test of time, a new survey from AARP New York and Siena College has discovered.

"We wanted to understand how boomers and Gen Xers were approaching and how prepared they are for retirement," AARP New York State Director Beth Finkel told Metro.

The survey, split evenly between ages 36-51 for Gen X and ages 52-70 for boomers, found that just one in five of the 800 New Yorkers that participated have made plans for retirement.

To Finkel, though, that wasn't even the most startling statistic. "There are so many," she said before sharing that 90 percent of participants said that saving is a problem and 52 percent have never researched what Social Security benefits they will receive.

With Social Security facing exhaustion by 2034 and two out of five survey respondents expecting to rely on it, "we have a runway of 18 years to build it up," Finkel said. "If it's not taken care of, every beneficiary will take a 25 percent cut. That's not giving an ability to live."

Additionally, 46 percent of participants said the government is not doing enough to make saving for retirement possible. That could change with initiatives like Gov. Andrew Cuomo's NY SMART (Saving More to Achieve Richer Tomorrows) Commission and city leaders' plans to implement an auto-enrollment saving plan for private-sector workers.

Until such changes happen, Finkel urges New Yorkers to "be proactive."

"They have to take pen to paper and have to come up with some kind of roadmap," she said, suggesting they use the free, anonymous calculators on the AARP and Social Security websites if "they don't want surprises — they should have a pot of gold."

US has few good options for response to Philippines' Duterte

For months, Washington has played down Duterte's anti-American insults and broadsides. But the flamboyant new leader raised the stakes to a new level on Thursday when he announced his "separation" from longtime ally the United States and realignment with Beijing and possibly even Moscow, America's two main strategic rivals.

Philippines President Rodrigo Duterte GETTY IMAGES

The Obama administration has few good options and limited leverage as it struggles to craft a response to Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte's increasingly hostile rhetoric towards the United States and his warm embrace of China.

Duterte's latest outburst, less than three weeks before the U.S. presidential election, casts further doubt on the seven-decade U.S.-Philippine alliance and threatens to further undermine President Barack Obama's faltering "pivot" to Asia as a counterbalance to China's growing assertiveness.

Potentially at stake is the Enhanced Defense

Cooperation Agreement, reached under Duterte's predecessor, allowing the United States to rotate ships, aircraft, and personnel through five Philippines bases, an arrangement seen as crucial to projecting U.S. military power on China's doorstep.

Mindful of Duterte's volatile nature, the Obama administration has tread carefully so far, seeking to avoid provoking him even as it chides him over his deadly war on drugs, U.S. officials say.

One U.S. official, who did not want to be identified, said there had been an active internal debate in recent months on how far to go in criticizing Duterte's government on human rights and that the measured tone adopted was not as strong as some aides would have liked.

U.S. attempts to raise questions about Duterte's campaign against drugs, in which more than 3,000 people have been killed since he took office in June, have drawn angry denunciations by Duterte. He has derided Obama as a "son of bitch" and said he should "go to hell."

"It doesn't seem to help to say anything because the minute you say something, he just lets loose his barrage of obscenities," said Murray Hiebert, deputy director of the Southeast Asia Program at the Center for Strategic and International Studies. "I think for the U.S. to just blast him constantly is probably not very effective."

There is a suspicion in Washington that Duterte could swing back to the United States — if he decides it suits his interests.

"There is no question that Duterte is ... trying to play the well-worn game of playing us off against the Chinese," another U.S. official said, on condition of anonymity. REUTERS

Trump picked as debate winner in Metro poll

Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump apparently could do no wrong in the debates, according to the results of Metro's unscientific, online polls.

Trump won the third and final debate, said 61.7 percent of those who submitted votes online. Democrat Hillary Clinton was declared the winner by 34.7 percent.

Only 1.4 percent proclaimed the debate a tie. And 2.2 percent chose the "I didn't bother watching" option.

The online poll attracted 648 responses.

The polling method is clearly unscientific, but only one vote is accepted per computer.

Only one participant chose to include a comment.

"He is not fit to be dog catcher, let alone president," wrote Gary Spino. "He is mean, inexperienced and vindictive."

Though Trump prevailed in all three Metro debate polls, his margin of victory declined slightly.

Metro's online poll after the first debate attracted the largest number of participants: 2,128. Trump was deemed the winner of that debate by 63.4 percent of the readers who voted.

Interestingly, 21 percent of those who participated in the first poll did so from outside the U.S. Votes were recorded from 54 other countries, including Russia, Malaysia and South Africa. GARY KANE

TRUMP'S THIRD STRIKE

The final votes have yet to be cast and Donald Trump may yet pull out a victory in the presidential contest, but the score for the debates is easy to see: Hillary Clinton 3, Donald Trump 0. I suspect his ardent fans would like Ann Coulter to chase me down the street with a Louisville Slugger for saying that, but it's not even a close call. Through all three of these matchups, Clinton steadily took bases while he committed one error after another.

Oh sure, he had "at bats." Trump was on firm ground when he hammered her for misleading voters, or her penchant for secrecy, or her finger-to-the-wind standards for leadership. Polls have shown voters are suspicious of her on all those fronts. And as he swatted at her vulnerabilities, she often seemed stiff and evasive.

"Do you have one set of beliefs in private and another in public?"

"Let's talk about the movie 'Lincoln'" hours of rehearsal gave her a fine command of information, they also made her seem even more like a longtime D.C. insider; underscoring what Democrats have feared and the polls have proven from the start: She is far from an ideal candidate.

So why did he lose?

Because too often he lurched into a caricature.

Squinting. Interrupting. Spouting half completed thoughts and thoroughly disproven "facts." Every time she baited him with an outside pitch, he swung so hard it took him to the ground. And when she popped one up — which she did, plenty — he seemed so intent being Thurston Howell III, he did not even notice her mistake falling right past his glove.

It wasn't supposed to be like this. For months D.C. wagered on whether studied competence or swing-for-the-fence showmanship would triumph. These debates were to be a clash of titans. What we got, however, was mostly three sad innings of lame insults, cheap shots and posturing.

Clinton was well-prepared, she largely remained calm and she had a game plan — enough to be a highly capable debater if not an inspiring one. But mainly the analysts all agreed — Trump was bad. And it doesn't take much to beat that.

Mexico stops truck with 121 Central American migrants bound for US

Immigration authorities in southern Mexico stopped a truck carrying 121 Central American migrants with signs of asphyxiation and dehydration, Mexico's National Migration Institute (INM) said in a statement on Thursday.

Migration officials stopped the truck during a routine operation in the southern state of Tabasco, and were alerted to the migrants inside when they heard screams for help. Of the 121 Central Americans they discovered, 55 were minors, with 23 girls and 32 boys.

The migrants had paid between $3,000 and $5,000 to be driven through Mexico to the U.S. border, and had been told not to eat or drink during the journey in order to avoid being detected by authorities, the INM said.

People smugglers have increasingly started using trucks to move migrants undetected through Mexico, which ramped up immigration detention efforts following a 2014 child migrant crisis on the southern U.S. border.

During fiscal year 2016, the number of unaccompanied children and family units detained at the southern U.S. border reached 137,366 people, exceeding the number in 2014, official U.S. data published on Tuesday showed.

"Border security alone cannot overcome the powerful push factors of poverty and violence that exist in Central America," Jeh Johnson, the secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, said in a statement announcing the 2016 data.

"Walls alone cannot prevent illegal migration," he added. "The reality is the system is broken, and badly in need of comprehensive immigration reform that only Congress can provide." REUTERS

BRIEF

Congressional race in Virginia shows Trump drag on Republicans

Barbara Comstock is trying to untether herself from Donald Trump in her re-election bid for the Congress, but the Virginia Republican's struggles show how difficult that can be.

Comstock represents a wealthy House of Representatives district in northern Virginia where Trump has become a burden, one that her opponent is wrapping around Comstock's neck.

In local campaign ads, Democratic challenger LuAnn Bennett takes every opportunity to tie Comstock to the New York real estate developer and Republican presidential nominee.

The strategy may be working. The Cook Political Report, a nonpartisan election tipsheet, moved the Comstock-Bennett race from "lean Republican" to "toss up" Wednesday, citing Trump's unpopularity in much of the district.

This is despite Comstock's months-long effort to jettison Trump. In April, the former lobbyist and state legislator said Trump was actually a Democrat who knows "nothing" about the economy.

She said in December that his plan to ban Muslim immigrants was "un-American" and "a silly idea." In March, she gave campaign donations she got from Trump to charity.

Earlier this month, she said Trump's boasts about groping women, revealed in a video tape, were "vile." She said she would not vote for him and urged Trump to drop out of the race against Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton. But it may be too late to undo the damage, political analysts said, with just 19 days remaining until Election Day.

Calif. launches criminal probe into Wells Fargo account scandal

A Wells Fargo sign is seen on the exterior of a bank branch. GETTY IMAGES

Attorney General Kamala Harris authorized a seizure warrant against the bank that seeks customer records and other documents, saying there is probable cause to believe the bank committed felonies.

The California Attorney General's Office has launched a criminal investigation into Wells Fargo over allegations it opened millions of unauthorized customer accounts and credit cards, according to a seizure warrant seen by Reuters.

Attorney General Kamala Harris authorized a seizure warrant against the bank that seeks customer records and other documents, saying there is probable cause to believe the bank committed felonies.

The probe marks the latest setback for the bank in a growing scandal that led to the abrupt retirement of its chief executive officer, monetary penalties, compensation clawbacks, lost business and damage to its reputation.

Wells Fargo spokesman Mark Folk did not immediately provide a comment in response to requests from Reuters, but was quoted in the Los Angeles Times as saying the bank is "cooperating in providing the requested information."

A spokeswoman for the California Department of Justice said she could not comment on the probe.

The bank's downward spiral kicked into high gear last month.

The U.S. Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and other regulators ordered the United States' third-largest bank by assets to pay $190 million in fines and restitution to settle civil charges that its branch staff created as many as two million accounts without customers' knowledge in order to meet internal sales targets.

The CFPB said that high pressure sales tactics and financial incentives fueled the fraud, which was largely carried out by low-level branch employees. About 5,300 of those employees were fired.

Shortly after the civil settlement was made public, CEO John Stumpf was called to testify before Congress.

Observers have widely criticized his performance, with many saying he appeared ill-prepared to deal with tough questioning by lawmakers including Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren, who called for his resignation and accused him of him "gutless" leadership. REUTERS

DISTRIBUTION NOTICE:

■ TRYING TO KEEP UP: Rapid shipments of heavy packages containing Vault Bricks loaded with valuable .999 solid U.S. State Silver Bars are flowing around the clock from the private vaults of the Lincoln Treasury to U.S. State residents who call 1-866-626-3962 Ext.FMS1594 to beat the 48-hour deadline.

U.S. State Silver Bars go to residents in 6 states

U.S. residents who find their state listed below in bold get first dibs at just the $59 minimum set for state residents while all non state residents must pay $134, if any silver bars remain

NATIONWIDE - The phone lines are ringing off the hook.

That's because U.S. State Silver Bars sealed away in State Vault Bricks are being handed over to NY, VT, MA, NJ, CT and PA residents at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury for the next 2 days.

This is not a misprint. For the next 2 days residents who find their state on the Distribution List above in bold are getting individual State Silver Bars at just the state minimum of $59 set by the Lincoln Treasury. That's why everyone should be taking full Vault Bricks loaded with five U.S. State Silver Bars before they're all gone.

And here's the best part. Every NY, VT, MA, NJ, CT and PA resident who gets at least two Vault Bricks is also getting free shipping and free handling. That's a real steal because all other state residents must pay over six hundred dollars for each State Vault Brick.

Just a few weeks ago, nobody knew that the only U.S. State Silver Bars locked away in the private vaults of the Lincoln Treasury would be allocated to the Federated Mint for a limited release to residents in 6 states. Every single one of the 50 U.S. State Silver Bars are date numbered in the order they ratified the Constitution and were admitted into the Union beginning in the late 1700s.

"As Executive Advisor to the Lincoln Treasury I get paid to deliver breaking news. So, for anyone who hasn't heard yet, highly collectable U.S. State Silver Bars are now being handed over at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury to residents in 6 states who beat the offer deadline, which is why I pushed for this announcement to be widely advertised," said Mary Ellen Withrow, the emeritus 40th Treasurer of the United States of America.

"These bars are solid .999 pure fine silver and will always be a valuable precious metal which is why everyone is snapping up as many as they can before they're all gone," Withrow said.

There's one thing Withrow wants to make very clear. State residents only have two days to call the Toll Free Order Hotlines to get the U.S. State Silver Bars.

"These valuable U.S. State Silver Bars are impossible to get at banks, credit unions or the U.S. Mint. In fact, they're only being handed over at state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury to NY, VT, MA, NJ, CT and PA residents who call the Toll Free Hotline before the deadline ends two days from today's publication date", said Timothy J. Shissler, Executive Director of Vault Operations at the private Lincoln Treasury.

To make it fair, special Toll Free Overflow Hotlines have been set up to ensure all residents have an equal chance to get them.

Rapid shipments to state residents are scheduled to begin with the first calls being accepted at precisely 8:30am today.

"We're bracing for all the calls and doing everything we can to make sure no one gets left out, but the U.S. State Silver Bars are only being handed over at just the state resident minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury for the next two days or until they're all gone, whichever comes first. For now, residents can get the U.S. State Silver Bars at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury as long as they call before the order deadline ends," confirmed Shissler.

"With so many state residents trying to get these U.S. State Silver Bars, lines are busy so keep trying. All calls will be answered," Shissler said. ■

Trump's stance on election results deepens Republican Party rifts

Trump's statement, the most controversial in a debate that at times descended into insults by both candidates, made banner headlines across the country and raised questions about whether he was committed to a peaceful transition of power, a cornerstone of American democracy.

Several prominent Republicans on Thursday denounced Donald Trump's refusal to commit to accepting the result of the presidential election, and some worried his stance might make it more difficult for his party to hold onto control of Congress.

Trump's refusal, which Democratic rival Hillary Clinton called "horrifying," was the standout remark of their third and final debate on Wednesday night. It ratcheted up Trump's claims that the election was being rigged against him, and became the latest flashpoint in an unusually volatile race three weeks before voters go to the polls.

The Republican candidate reinforced his comment at a rally in Delaware, Ohio, on Thursday, saying he would respect the result "if I win."

"Of course I would accept a clear election result, but I would also reserve my right to contest or file a legal challenge in the case of a questionable result," he said.

With Trump trailing in opinion polls, the focus ahead of the Nov. 8 vote is shifting to Congress, and whether Republicans will keep their narrow majority in the Senate or even their larger advantage in the House of Representatives.

Sen. John McCain of Arizona, who lost the 2008 presidential election to Democrat Barack Obama, said accepting the election result is "the American way."

"I didn't like the outcome of the 2008 election. But I had a duty to concede, and I did so without reluctance," McCain, who has opened a poll lead in his Senate re-election race, said in a statement. "A concession isn't just an exercise in graciousness. It is an act of respect for the will of the American people, a respect that is every American leader's first responsibility."

McCain has withdrawn his support for Trump.

Asked on Wednesday night if he would commit to a peaceful transition of power, the businessman-turned-politician replied: "What I'm saying is that I will tell you at the time. I'll keep you in suspense. OK?"

Democrats jumped to ask Republican candidates whether they agreed with Trump, who is making his first run for public office against Clinton, a former first lady, senator and secretary of state. REUTERS

Demi's next act

THE FUN STARTS HERE

Demi Lovato discusses going blond, Hillary Clinton and her break from the spotlight.

LUCIA HERNANDEZ
Metro World News
letters@metro.us

Demi Lovato is out to prove that blondes really do have more fun.

The 24-year-old singer-actress has been showing off her golden locks as an ambassador for Koleston Astonishing Blonde hair dye. We chatted with the "Body Say" songstress about why her new hair color has everyone talking.

You shocked the world with your new hair color.

Why did you do it?

Well, I heard Koleston has a new technology that makes the transition from dark to blond hair really easy. And I knew I was coming to Mexico, so I wanted to try something different for my Mexican fans.

Do blonds really have more fun?
I feel good. It's fun.

You've tried out lots of very bold looks throughout your career. What's been your wildest style?
The bravest one I think I've had was when I had a half-shaved head and I also colored it pink.

What was your favorite?

I love having long hair, but short hair is much easier to care for and keep healthy. So you never know what my next new cut could be ...

Now that you're a blonde, you must have a different beauty regimen. What's your top tip for keeping your hair looking healthy?

Definitely. I think no matter what my look is, the most important thing is to always maintain healthy hair. And when you make a radical change like this, it is very important to apply deep hydration treatments frequently.

You recently joined Cast Recovery's intimate speaking tour dedicated to the care of mental patients. What difference do you think you can make?

What I want to achieve with Cast is to put mental health in the public eye and make it known. And for people to realize that there is nothing wrong or taboo about mental illness. It's about caring for [yourself], and I want to show people that perspective. The more aware we are, the better we will be able to support those in need. I want to help as many people as possible.

Is that what you'll be focusing on in 2017 since you announced your break from showbiz?

Yes, my priority will be altruistic work.

Do you have anything planned for your return?
Not really. My mind is focused on Cast for now.

Many girls and women suffer from poor self-esteem, how would you advise them to stay safe?
I would just tell them that it is very important not to be so hard and demanding on yourself. You have to love yourself and make daily positive affirmations and recognize your own beauty, even on those days when you do not feel so well.

Do you practice this yourself?
Yes. I try to not be so critical of myself. I make sure to keep a healthy diet and exercise constantly. That way I feel good and also in front of my mirror daily I repeat positive statements that remind me I'm beautiful and that helps me a lot.

Speaking of exercise, what's your favorite?
Boxing — I love to hit things.

Do you practice it daily?
Yes, every day.

Do you think that the U.S. and the rest of the world are ready for a blond president?
Definitely! Of course, I think the U.S. is ready for a woman president.

Cobie Smulders doesn't get angry

The "Jack Reacher" co-star doesn't get while people keep casting her as tough and scary.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

The good news: Cobie Smulders got to spend part of the "Jack Reacher: Never Go Back" shoot in New Orleans. The bad news: She was doing an action movie. The actress couldn't go whole hog with eating and drinking, couldn't partake in the city's wares. After all, she had to be tough.

In the sequel to the 2012 action movie, the "How I Met Your Mother" alum — and Marvel's resident badass Maria Hill — plays Susan Turner, a major in the U.S. military who finds herself teaming up with Tom Cruise's wandering fixer after she's wrongly accused of murder. Smulders, 34, spends most of the movie pissed-off and hurting people. In real life, Smulders is — as she puts it — you know, Canadian.

So this is nuts, but you had a broken leg when you were hired for "Jack Reacher." You broke it the night before you started Clea DuVall's indie "The Intervention," in which you hobble about on crutches. What on earth happened? Nothing, nothing. I tripped and fell in my apartment. Nothing.

That's why I was like, "It's fine." I thought I had dislocated my knee and it was sliding back into place. And it turned out to be a fracture, which got bigger and bigger as I kept walking around, till eventually I couldn't use it anymore. When I showed up on the "Intervention" set, we were in the friggin' swamps of Savannah. I was like, "You can hire someone else, that's totally fine." And Clea just said, "Let's use it." It ended up kind of working in the film, I thought — or at least it wasn't a total distraction.

Given all the prep you did, did your body just rebel once you were done with the movie?

Once I got back to New York, I got bronchitis, then I got the flu, then I had, like, strep throat or something. It was like a big FU to my body. My body was like, "You pushed us hard for so long," like one of those things where when you finally take a rest, that's when you get sick, because your adrenaline is no longer pumping in your system. I don't know scientifically what goes on, but I do find that once I finally have a week off, it's like, "No, you're sick."

GETTY IMAGES

This being "Jack

Reacher," the fighting and stunts have this grounded, realistic quality. Even so, I can't imagine doing all my own stunts.

Well, you would, if you trained for months. When you do friggin' sliding drills over and over and over again for hours a day, you go, "Yeah, I can see how I did that." [Laughs] Because I did it every day for two months.

You have this ability to be friendly and funny, but here — and in Andrew Bujalski's indie "Results" — you're equally convincing as someone who's tough and often angry. How do you think people saw this side of you? I have no idea. I honestly don't know how I get these roles.

You don't seem that menacing.

I'm not! I hate confrontation. I hate it. I have a problem even saying,

"I didn't like that." I'm very Canadian. I'm very easygoing. ["Jack Reacher" director Edward Zwick] had to push me a bit in this one. He had to amp me up. I would think a take was really big, and he'd be like, "No, that was more like you were kind of upset. We need you to be really, really upset." I can't gauge that. To me, it's all yelling and anger. But it's probably not as angry as it seems.

The service that wants to turn the movie business “upside down”

Streaming service making it easier for indies to find audience.

LILY WILLIAMS
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

Serial entrepreneur Martin Warner wants to shake things up. Flix Premiere, his ambitious new streaming movie service, won't just change the way we watch movies, he promises — it is poised to disrupt the entire film industry.

“I’m essentially turning it upside down,” Warner says.

Until now, says Warner, there were two ways to watch film: streaming services and theaters. Flix Premiere represents a third way, combining the convenience of online content with the excitement of the theater. “It’s going to change the entire industry and bring something not just new, but very different.”

Recently, Flix Premiere announced it was now available on Apple TV, the first of many new distribution channels in the works for the company, which focuses on independent films.

Warner, who has started companies as varied as 3-D printing and recruitment, credits his business instincts with the idea for Flix Premiere. “I saw movies going online really fast. I saw Blockbuster going out of business. I saw it way before it happened,” he confides. He also saw the new on-demand services mimicking the way video stores operated, requiring customers to sift through vast amounts of content, much of which could be found elsewhere.

And he recognized an opportunity: a market for a service that would offer exclusive, curated content, and replicate the buzz and build-up of a theatrical release. To create that anticipation, Flix Premiere markets films through social media and online “Red Carpet” premieres.

“I wanted to recapture the excitement of going to the cinema and bring it online. It’s very, very, very different from Netflix or Amazon, which are just essentially stores to stream movies,” says Warner. With only six to eight releases per month, Flix Premiere uses advanced metrics to select “audience worthy” movies.

To source films for Flix Premiere, Warner and his team scour “small but significant festivals,” such as Telluride, Berlin and Venice, seeking hidden gems. While he allows he’s “swimming up tide” to convince distributors and filmmakers to embrace his new model, he’s competing — and increasingly winning — against more established contenders for exclusive rights to new films. One such movie is “Interwoven,” starring Oscar winner Mo’Nique, which Warner boasts he “stole from Netflix and Amazon. It’s been a big success for us. It’s a wonderful independent movie.”

It’s indies that are at the heart of Flix Premiere’s business. Films in their library include a British comedy (“SuperBob”), an intimate period drama (“A Nightingale Falling”) and an action film (“Tula, the Revolt”).

“We speak for the former independent movie market,” which he calls “the poor relation” of studio films. “We know that’s not true, because movies aren’t measured by budget, or talent, or who made it. They’re measured by resonance, impact, relevance, story ... those are the things that matter about movies.”

Through its website,

A NIGHTINGALE FALLING

Period drama “A Nightingale Falling” is one of the movies available on Flix Premiere. PROVIDED flixpremiere.com, Apple TV, and apps for iOS and Android, Flix Premiere’s current rotating library offers viewers access to 200 films, with an additional 450 in the pipeline. Rather than being a subscription service, films cost $4.99 each: “It’s like going to the box office and buying a ticket.”

Warner, a movie buff who splits his time between London and New York’s Hell’s Kitchen and East Hampton, seems nostalgic for the very theater experience Flix Premiere may be helping supplant. “I hope it doesn’t go away,” he says “because I still want to go to the movie theater.”

Detecting in the dark

The new BBC series "Dirk Gently's Holistic Detective Agency" makes a not-exact science of investigation.

@thisiskisk
eva.kisk@metro.us

Oddball detective shows have been going strong for over a decade, but none have included a paranormal element. The title character in "Dirk Gently's Holistic Detective Agency," a new series premiering on BBC America this Saturday at 9 p.m., solves cases by tapping into the universe — but not in a strictly useful way.

"He's not psychic, but he receives messages which are interpreted to him as intuitions and hunches," says series star Samuel Barnett during an interview with the cast. "But the problem is it's all pure instinct, so he's constantly acting on impulse, getting into trouble, absolutely leaping before he looks."

To actually solve crimes, Gently is joined by a reluctant sidekick, who mostly accidentally helps unravel his visions (played by Elijah Wood); a hyper-competent but neurotic bodyguard (Jade Eshete); and a girl with a supernatural disease (Hannah Marks). Further complicating things is an assassin — also guided by the whims of the universe — who has made Gently her next target (Fiona Dourif).

"I can honestly say I haven't seen anything like this on TV before," says Barnett. "The world we're in is a very grounded world in which extraordinary things happen."

His co-star Marks sums it up even more succinctly: "If Sherlock was horrible at his job, and then there was some magic and some corgis."

Though written by Douglas Adams, author of "Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy," "Dirk Gently" takes place in the real world. It's been adapted before, both as a radio drama and a 2010 series, but this time the BBC brought 31-year-old American writer/producer Max Landis on board, best known for the Kristen Stewart-Jesse Eisenberg stoner thriller "American Ultra."

"Dirk Gently's Holistic Detective Agency" stars Samuel Barnett as the sort-of-psychic detective and Elijah Wood as his reluctant partner, Todd. BETINA STRAUSS

The series kicks off with the murder of a millionaire, and adds psychic vampires, a cult leader and a winning lottery ticket. Then things get really strange.

"A thing I wanted to do differently [from the 2010 series] was that it wasn't 'Dirk Gently' — it was something more like 'Psych,' it was something more like 'Monk,' it was like a quirky detective show," says Landis. "'Dirk Gently' is an insane science fiction novel."

Keeping things from going off the rails is Executive Producer Rob Cooper, a veteran of all three "Stargate" TV series who knows what makes a larger-than-life show work.

"It's a danger in Douglas Adams' work that you can go off the rails, and it was very important to all of us that we create characters that felt very real, even as they have these very strange things come into our lives," he says. "This collection of characters, as odd and occasionally murderous as they are, are people you'd want to hang out with."

"Moonlight"

Director: Barry Jenkins
Stars: Trevante Rhodes, Andre Holland
Rating: R

Yes, believe the hype: Barry Jenkins' "Moonlight" arrives in theaters as a film festival juggernaut, hitting a marketplace ready for an empathetic, incisive look at the state of black America. Look close enough, though, and it's nowhere near a message movie. It's the human factor, the messiness and visual beauty that push it over.

Told over three time periods, with three different lead actors, it follows Chiron, raised in the rough Liberty City section of Miami, as he morphs from a shy kid (played by Alex Hibbert) into a bullied teen (Ashton Sanders) and, finally, into a hard, grill'd-up adult (Trevante Rhodes). Each narrative leap is a cosmic shock, each transformation a heart-breaker. By the time our hero's become a ripped drug dealer, he and the film seem destined for a devastating end.

But what happens next is magical. Jenkins' film takes an unpredictable turn in its final section, breaking free during one of the year's longest and most arresting scenes, which plays with our tendency to expect the worst.

Thing is, "Moonlight" was always hopeful. Its characters, from Chiron's crack-addicted mom (Naomie Harris) to a paternal dealer who takes him under his wing (Mahershala Ali), are rich and complex, never only one way. Jenkins plays with stereotypes and conventions only so he can upend them. The ugliest parts are beautiful, and the beautiful parts transcendent. By the end, calling "Moonlight" an "important" film seems like an insult. It's even better than that. MATT PRIGGE

Things to watch for as Giants face Rams

The G-Men travel to London looking to rise above .500.

KRISTIAN DYER
@KristianRDyer
sports@metro.us

Following a breakout performance by the passing offense last Sunday, the New York Giants are hoping to continue the good vibes this weekend on the road. And when we say on the road, we mean it.

Welcome to London for the Giants, who are making a return trip to England — this time to play the Los Angeles Rams. It is the chance for the Giants to get above .500 and to get some momentum before the bye week.

Frequent flyer miles

It will be a long road trip for the Giants, who depart Thursday for London to play in one of the NFL's international showcase games. There is plenty of talk this week about time zones, jet lag and the such, but both teams have to face it. And playing a West Coast team that has even more miles to go is a definite advantage for the Giants.

Leaving Thursday for a Sunday game is a bit later than most teams going overseas depart.

"We wanted to get our heavy lifting done early. Get on a normal week at the beginning of the week," head coach Ben McAdoo said. "Get plenty of rest in and give them an opportunity to get ahead of the game as far as that goes and then battle through our fresh Friday over there."

The Giants' pass rush showed signs of life last week, getting after Ravens QB Joe Flacco. GETTY IMAGES

The Case for Keenum

Coming off what might have been the best game of his professional career, albeit a loss, Rams quarterback Case Keenum might be finding his stride. He completed a gaudy 84 percent of his passes for 321 yards and had three touchdowns to one interception. Against a Giants secondary that is banged up and had some struggles, this could be a matchup advantage for the Rams.

Keenum came into the league as an undrafted rookie free agent in 2012 and has played in just 22 games in that stretch.

He is forming a great chemistry with wide receiver Kenny Britt, a Rutgers product.

"Kenny is a great target. I noticed this offseason and in training camp that he is hungry this year. He has a lot to bring to the table as an athlete," Keenum said. "He is a good target out there, big, strong guy, goes up and gets the ball and he is hard to bring down when he gets the ball in his hands, so I have really enjoyed throwing him the football and I think he is working hard, doing a good job of being in the right place and we have been managing to hook up a little bit."

3 Getting some pressure

It wasn't a perfect performance from the Giants last weekend against the Ravens but it was much improved in terms of getting after the quarterback. In particular in the second half, the Giants did a good job in collapsing the pocket on Joe Flacco.

They came into that Week 6 game with just four sacks and had two against the Ravens. The trickledown effect of the pass rush was that it aided the secondary as Flacco had to rush a number of throws or find his safety outlets.

Where to place your money in Week 7

Roll with these three road favorites in Week 7.

Bills (-3) at Dolphins

The Bills appeared to be headed for disaster after starting 0-2 and firing their offensive coordinator, but they've reeled off four straight wins and are poised to make it five straight against Miami this week.

The Dolphins managed to upset the Steelers and an injured Ben Roethlisberger last week but they've still been a bad home team of late, posting a 3-11 ATS (against the spread) record in their last 14 games in Miami. The Dolphins were torched for 235 rushing yards by the Titans two weeks ago and could meet a similar fate on Sunday as the Bills' top-ranked running game comes into town. Miami has had no answer for their division rival of late, putting up a 1-5 record ATS in their last six contests with Buffalo. The combined score from last year's tilts was 74-31 in favor of the Bills.

Rex Ryan said his team is playing "boring football" right now, but the bottom line is they're winning. Expect Buffalo to keep the momentum going.

The pick: Bills -3

Vikings (-2.5) at Eagles

The only undefeated team in the league (also 5-0 ATS) comes into Philadelphia to play the slumping Eagles off a bye and they're only favored by 2.5 points? It seems suspicious, but the Vikings aren't the kind of team the public likes to bet on. Sam Bradford is a not a star quarterback and has no high-profile options around him, but they're still putting up 23.8 PPG. That's thanks in part to the Vikings' suffocating defense that's forced 12 turnovers and only allows 287.6 YPG (second best in the league).

Carson Wentz has turned into a pumpkin after a fantastic September and could be in for another rough day against Minnesota's stoppers. Wentz was sacked five times last week and is now matched up against a Vikings team that's amassed 19 sacks in five games (the third-best mark in the NFL).

Minnesota could win by two scores, so laying less than a field goal is of no concern. They're the best bet of the week.

The pick: Vikings -2.5

Patriots (-7) at Steelers

The tale of the tape spells doom for the hot-and-cold Steelers, especially with Ben Roethlisberger ruled out. New England is 2-0 straight-up and ATS since Tom Brady's return, covering sizable lines over the Browns and Bengals. Landry Jones, who fills in for "Big Ben" here, played poorly in relief last year, throwing two picks in his lone complete game. Bill Belichick is probably not losing much sleep game planning for Jones, especially since there is game tape of Jones readily available.

Even if Roethlisberger were fully healthy this game appears to be a complete mismatch on paper.

The pick: Patriots -7

3 Things to watch for as Jets face Ravens

It's officially Geno time, for better or worse.

TONY WILLIAMS
sports@metro.us

Geno Smith is back at the helm for the Jets (1-5), as they take on the Baltimore Ravens (3-3). And while the season seems to be on the brink of already being over, head coach Todd Bowles is hoping for a spark — anything — to keep hope alive.

The last time Smith faced the Ravens, it was 2013, in Baltimore, and it was his 11th start of his rookie campaign. He didn't fare very well in going 9-of-22 with two interceptions in a 19-3 loss. But this time around, Smith will have some nice weapons at his disposal — at least on paper. The Jets, however, need to translate said talent into actual on-field production, as they enter Sunday's tilt with the worst point differential in the league (minus-69), and that even includes the winless Cleveland Browns.

1 Where's the rush?

Earlier in the season, it appeared that the Jets would invoke the old ground-and-pound philosophy as Matt Forte was a rushing machine (196 yards and three scores) in the first two weeks of the season. But those days appear to be over, as his production — and offensive coordinator Chan Gailey's faith in calling runs — has diminished each week. The Jets' running attack ranks 19th in the league (92.5 yards per game), and a big part of that is a lack of running plays called, as Forte and backup Bilal Powell have combined for just 28 carries the past two weeks. The bottom fell out Monday night in Arizona when Forte only tallied 19 rushing yards.

2 Injuries are the great equalizer

Baltimore is on a strange ride right now, as it has lost three straight after opening the season with three-straight wins. It's the Ravens' second-straight trip to MetLife Stadium in as many weeks, following Week 5's gut-wrenching defeat to the Giants. A big part of the team's recent slide is health — something to which the Jets can also relate. Quarterback Joe Flacco (shoulder) did not practice on Wednesday or Thursday, while defensive stars like six-time Pro Bowl linebacker/defensive end Terrell Suggs suffered a torn triceps in the loss to the Giants. Flacco has been listed as questionable all week, but Ravens head coach John Harbaugh noted his quarterback has a "legitimate shot" at playing. Suggs, however, may not suit up, despite his pleas to play through it. He played through a similar injury in 2012, though, and Harbaugh left the door slightly ajar.

"He has a chance to come back soon. How soon remains to be determined," said Harbaugh.

"I think this week would be tough for him, but I don't put anything out of Terrell Suggs' ability to overcome."

3 Let my Geno throw

The Ravens' defense isn't just decimated in the front seven with Suggs's ailment, but the secondary has been compromised lately, too. Gang Green might actually be wise to let Smith grip it and rip it, considering how banged-up Baltimore's secondary has been. Smith and Brandon Marshall (27 receptions for 433 yards and two touchdowns) may be able to take advantage of a Ravens' back four that may not have top cornerback Jimmy Smith, who sustained a concussion last week against the Giants.

metro.us/horoscopes

Aries Emotional matters will escalate quickly. Think before you tackle something. Formulate the best way to keep the peace and solve the problem.

Taurus Getting together with peers, family or people you can learn from will lead to new opportunities and greater self-awareness. Don't fear doing things differently.

Gemini Develop an idea you have been contemplating in order to discover what you will need to bring your plan to fruition. Discuss possibilities with someone you trust.

Cancer Overspending, overdoing it and being indulgent will add to your stress. Do your best to be moderate and willing to listen and learn.

Leo Don't take no for an answer. Your persuasive skills will help you get your way and enforce new plans. Love and romance will improve your life and bring you happiness.

Virgo Look for advice from someone who has more experience than you. You may not like what you hear, but it will help you come up with a beneficial plan.

Libra Don't expect others to agree with you or give you handouts. Emotions will be difficult to control. Back away before you end up saying or doing something you'll regret.

Scorpio It's important to do sufficient research before you make a move. Let your unique style lead the way. Less talk and more action will bring results.

Sagittarius Be prepared to make changes that will improve your current living arrangement. Sharing your space with someone special will improve your day.

Capricorn Concentrate on what you can do for others, not on how you can dismantle someone's dreams. Offer constructive suggestions and worthwhile solutions.

Aquarius You can offer help without letting it cost you financially. A partnership can be formed that will change your life. Romance will bring a renewed commitment.

Pisces Partnerships will be daunting if you cannot bring yourself to stand up for your rights. Re-evaluate the importance of troubling professional connections. EUGENIA LAST
